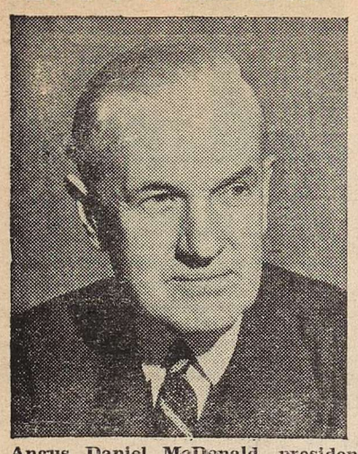
S. P. Head Dies



Angus Daniel McDonald, president of the Southern Pacific Company, who died after an operation in the S. P. Hospital on Saturday.

A. D. McDonald, Railroad President, Buried On Tuesday

Entire System Stops For One Minute to Honor Memory of Chief.

At 10 a. m. Tuesday morning, as the requiem mass began at St. Francis De Sales Catholic church in Oakland for Angus Daniel McDonald, all work throughout the entire Southern Pacific system stopped for one minute. From Oregon to Louisiana every train was halted and work ceased entirely for thousands of ticket agents, section hands, business and supply department employees to pay quiet tribute the former president of the great company as he passed to his final resting place.

McDonald, who guided the vast railway through its dangerous depression era, was known as one of the greatest railroad men in the nation. He underwent an abdominal operation on Thursday and apparently was convalescing satisfactorily when a sudden relapse brought on death Saturday in the Southern Pacific hospital in San Francisco. He was 63 at the time of his passing.

Born and bred a railroader, he knew the problems of the business from the ground up. His father, Angus, superintended construction of the company's lines in Sacramento valley and along the coast route. McDonald was educated in bay area public schools and at Notre Dame University. He went to work for the S. P. as a clerk in 1901. In three years he was moved to the acocunting department and in 1907 was named auditor of the Los Angeles Pacific Company, an S. P. subsidiary.

In 1913 he became deputy controller of the road with offices in New York; 1925, director and vice chairman of the executive committee; 1926, president of the Texas and New Orleans Railroad company, operator of the S. P. in Texas and Louisiana; 1929, head of the Southern Pacific Steamship Lines, and in 1932, president of the entire system succeeding Paul Shoup.

He is survived by his widow and two brothers.

TRUCKEE LODGE HAS FIRST ROLL CALL AT AT BANQUET THURS.

The first annual roll call meeting of Summit Temple No. 79, Pythian Sisters, was held at Capitol Hall on Thursday evening and was attended by nearly 100 members and guests.

Following the banquet, served at the conclusion of a brief business session, a program of entertainment and speaking was presented. The program included vocal solos by Norrie Waddington; roll call by Mrs. Andre Oroz with each member responding; recitation by F. W. Gaiennie; vocal solo by Mrs. C. J. Bowers; remarks by Mrs. Charles Heller, excellent chief; piano solo by Mrs. J. R. Wolert; accordion solo by Al Fontana; vocal duet by Mrs. James Garibaldi and Mrs. F. W. Gaiennie; address by W. M. Englehart, Sr., who spoke or fraternalism and the reasons for the success of the local Pythian lodges. Englehart also showed motion pictures of an elephant hunt.

The committee in charge included Mrs. Garibaldi, Mrs. Gaiennie, Mrs. Al Fontana and Mrs. Gino Giovannoni.

A gift was presented to Mr. and Fred Kohler on the occasion of the former's birthday for the splendid work they have done in the two orders. Mrs. Walter Barrett was awarded the hand made quilt.

Red Cross workers who have volunteered to assist in the important task of lessening human suffering throughout the world and particularly in our own country, report that in all cases with rare exception, they are being warmly received. These rare exceptions, they report, are the ones which make their task difficult. If they were asking for something for themselves or even for a less worthy cause, there might be a reason for a discourteous answer, but they are informed that "it's all a graft" and when met with equally impolite receptions it is rather disheartening. There are those who cannot give and those who do not care to give to this cause for reasons of their own, but the volunteers should at least be granted the courtesy to which they are rightly entitled and not be treated as rank criminals. The work here is progressing splendidly, thanks to the score of volunteer workers who are unselfishly giving of their time to help Truckee put over its quota.

Today is Thanksgiving Day in California. We wonder if we are not taking this occasion too lightly and as a matter of fact. When we ponder ever so briefly over the many things we have for which to offer thanks it is startling. Uusually we are inclined to think and talk more of the undesirable features of our everyday life and sometimes forget the pleasant things. Today let us pause and offer sincere thanks that we are Americans living in a great country, in a great state, in a swell town.

To those who have not already prepared your Christmas shopping list, may we offer a bit of oft repeated advice? Your local merchants are now displaying gift goods which are sure to please everyone. Before you shop out of town—if you feel that you must—drop into Truckee stores look over the gift items, compare prices and values and see if you can't fill that order right here. You may be well assured that your patronage will be fully appeciated by those merchants who make Truckee a good town in which to live.

YOUTH CLAIMING TO BE BAD MAN HELD FOR OBSERVATION

A young man, claiming to be a brother of Pretty Boy Floyd as well as numerous other things, was arrested Monday night by Deputy Constable Frank Titus and held for investigation. He was apparently deranged and was taken to Nevada City by Deputy Sheriff N. F. Dolley. The man was threatening to stage a series of "stick ups" in Truckee.

Speaker Talks To Rotary, Students Here On Monday

Truckee and Tahoe School Pupils Hear Americanism Talk at Meeting.

A Syrian-born American youth who escaped the squalor and terror of his war-torn native land to win success in the New World, was the speaker at the Truckee-Tahoe Rotary Club on Monday night. One of the youngest lecturers in the country, Salmon Rizk spoke on "Americanism and Education." He is sponsored by Readers' Digest magazine.

As their guests to hear the speaker the Rotarians had students from the Tahoe branch of Placer Union High School and the Meadow Lake Union High School in Truckee.

Other guests were Glenn Robinson and Hobart Snider of Truckee and Frank Clark of Tahoe.

In a time when the ideals of democracy are facing attack and when the question of tomorrow's opportunities for today's youth is being widely discussed, Rizk's talk was both timely and challenging.

Price Rhodes, Reno attorney, will be next week's speaker at the Rotary meeting.

TRUCKEE LIONS TO GO TO MEETING AT COLFAX ON MONDAY

COLFAX, Nov. 20—Jeff Carvath head football coach at the University of San Francisco, will be the speaker at the annual football party and Donner Zone ladies night dinner to be held by the Colfax Lions Club next Monday evening in the auditorium of the Colfax grammar school at 7:30 o'clock.

The annual football party is being combined this year with a Donner Zone meeting and the eleven clubs of the zone, including the Truckee Lions Club, are cooperating in the affair. Several of the clubs are presenting one number on the program.

District Governor Dr. Clifford E. Johnson will be an honored guest. In addition, the Colfax Lions will have as their guests the Placer Junior College football team and its coaches and the jaysee band. The Auburn Lions, cooperating with the Colfax den, will have as their guests the football team and coaches of the Placer Union High School.

It is expected that approximately 200 Lions and guests will attend the affair which will start with a turkey dinner.

TRUCKEE BOYS PASS FIRST TESTS TO JOIN NAVY ON TUESDAY

Eight Truckee boys were examined and questioned Tuesday by Arthur R Hill, U. S. Navy recruiting officer of Sacramento, who came here in response to advertising coupons sent in from the Sierra Sun. Two of the eight, Robert George Leamon and William George Waters, successfully passed the preliminary examinations and their applications for enlistment were accepted.

Two others were disqualified because of physical handicaps and others were given desired information and have the enlistment under consideration.

While the applications do not mean that boys will be accepted, it is the first step. Final examinations will be held in San Francisco in December and if these are passed the boys will be eligible for naval service.

Hill reported that his visit to Truckee marked the second time in the past year when he has passed upon two applications in a single trip to outlying towns from Sacramento. He also expressed himself as well pleased with the calibre of young men making application here.

Sierra Circuit Theater Razed In Morning Fire In Loyalton Monday

Truckee Man Sustains $20,000 Loss As Cinema Burns to Ground.

Fire early Monday morning completely destroyed the Sierra Theater at Loyalton with an estimated loss of more than $20,000.

The theater building, which also housed two stores, one an occupied dress shop, was owned and operated by V. C. Shattuck of Truckee, who also owns the Donner Theater here, the Yuba in Downieville and the Tahoe Theater at Kings Beach.

The structure was erected only three years ago and was in excellent condition. Aside from the building, all the equipment, including two motion picture projectors and other cinema necessities, was destroyed.

While the cause of the fire was not definitely known, it was presumed to have started in a cubby-hole in the rear which housed the switch boxes and electric water heater. A short circuit is blamed.

A nearby resident, returning home about 4 o'clock Monday morning, reported smelling smoke and making an investigation. Nothing was found to indicate trouble but a short time later the fire and smoke filled building burst into flames. It was impossible to salvage even part of the equipment.

Shattuck was notified and rushed to Loyalton but too late to be of any assistance. Much of the loss was covered by insurance.

RETIREMENT AGE CAN BRING NEW ACTIVITY

A few years ago a man in England had arrived at the age when men think of retiring. Other men his age were being etired, but he did not want to give up. He was past the Retirement, howvere, was forced on him. He was interested in the world around him, soi nstead of rusting out, he decided to take upa new subject and learn all he could about it! He decided to study fingerprints.

He was Francis Galton.

His friends told old man Galton he was foolish; he could not make money from it. But the subject interested him and he wanted to elarn all about it.

The principle of finger printing hac been known for years but nothing had ever come of it. So Francis Galton started in to learn all he could about it. What he was going to do with the knowledge he didn't know. All he knew was that he was not going to sit aound and worry about himself and get full of aches and pains. He began to make fingerprints, collected them, tsudied them, classified them. He put them into categories. He became absorbed in the work. His step grew lighter; he was considered younger than men of his age who had retired.

He began to write on the subject of fingerprints and fingerprint identification. He decided that it might be applied to the identifciation of criminals. He worked harder than ever now. A new and important use had suddenly opened. When he was 70 he published a book on the subject. He made the startling statement that no two fingerprints were exactly alike; also said they could be classified It shook the British government. And it takes something to shake the British. Was their old method out of date? The British government appointed a commission to study his discoveries and claims and decided to make use of his discoveries. He was knighted. He was made Sir Francis Galton.

Other men started to work, and his system was improved. It swept over England, it raced over the sea and the basis of his system is now in use in the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington, D. C.—our famous FBI. About 6,000 fingerprint records are received by the bureau each day. These are all classified handled, and answered within 36 hours.

How much getter it was for him to pitch into something new, when retirement age came, than to sit around and do nothing. Don't ever retire. You may have to give up your job, but don't give up your mind! It will work for you as long as you live. True, it will work slower, but it will work more accurately. So when retirement age comes, don't be one of those who climb into a rocking-chair and talk about the good old days and prognosticate that the younger generation is going to Hades. Seize something new; continue to live!

JOIN RED CROSS

Thrice each year there spring up drives that should receive the support of every American worthy of the name. Right now we are in the middle of one of these drives—The American Red Cross Roll Call. Today, more than ever before, your help is needed by the great humanitarian effort. If you have not joined the Red Cross nor been contacted to join by a worker, come into the Sierra Sun office or call Mrs. Frank Titus if you live in Truckee or Mrs. Norman R. Mayfield at Tahoe. Give generously as you can, for bread thus cast upon the waters usually comes back with butter on it.

STREET SEENS: Mr. and Mrs. H. A. L. Jones and daughter, Lois, weighing anchor out of Truckee... also, their pooch, White King...L. A Greene stringing Christmas decorations in his five and dime...Cecil Edmunds and Larry Zoebel bowling for blood...Phil Geier in Tony's on Saturday night...Sylvia Barton looking all over Gateway Park for temporarily prodigal son Lowell early on a frosty morn...Roy Fletcher Waters trying hard but not successfully to look nonchalant about a pheasant he killed opening day while carrying it down the street...John Pettiti holding up the Shell station with his right elbow...Annie Kehm taking tickets at the Donner Theater while Dolly Henderson is laid up—or should I say, laid down?

It's not often that Verne Shattuck gives a main feature at the Donner Theater a personal boost. Just 'cause a movie company puts out a lot of publicity on a show, don't cut any ice with Verne. So when he waxes enthusiastic over an "added attraction" it's bound to be nothing short of good. On December 6—Saturday—he's booked a featurette called "Minstrel Days" and starring a score of the biggest names in minstreldom including Al Jolsin and Eddie Cantor Vaudeville came and went, so did the big apple, boyish bobs and bootleg but one American "fad" that has survived for more than a century is the old fashioned minstrel show and this short—if it one quarter as good as Verne says it is—will a celluloid monument to this traditional form of American entertainment. So it behooves me and thee to mark with red pencil, book keeping ink, crayon or lipstick the date Saturday, December 6, and plan to see 'Minstrel Days' at the Donner.

Today in California and next week in Nevada Americans will turn thier eyes to heaven and fervently thank God, Allah or Jehovah for the eternal blessing that he has bestowed upon this land of ours. It is the one time during the year when we perform a rite that should be daily affair—especially after viewing the world around us. We thank God that we live in a nation where all—not one alone—is "By The Grace of God, King." Our more "sophisticated" laugh at the prideful way the more simple of us regard our nation and its blessings but, "by the grace of God" we've a right to be proud. We live in the greatest, most prosperous and finest country on the face of the earth and for that today and everyday, we should say sincerely and simply, "Thanks, God!"

WINGS FOR AMERICA

BY DON WILEY
MEMBER, AVIATION WRITERS ASSN.

This is the story of a dream...and of how teamwork made that dream a reality

Let's step behind the scenes of America's vast military aircraft building program for a moment and meet the actors in this story—John K. Northrop, a designer who for years dreamed of something appoaching the "perfect" airplane, and Dr. Theodore von Karman, one of the world's most distinguished aeronautical scientists.

These two men have supplied an outstanding example of the manner in which the men who build American aircraft work with the men in the researech laboratories of our universities in order that the planes which protect this nation shall be the swiftest, most efficient and most formidable in the world.

Many times this spirit of cooperation has borne fruit. The latest example is the now famous Northrop Wing, the existence of which was blazoned across the front pages of American newspapers a few weeks ago; a ship which Jack Northrop believes may well be the forerunner of a whole new family of airplanes.

The idea of a flying wing—a tailless airplane in which every part of the airfoil contributes to the lift—had long been in the back of Jack Northrop's head. As far back as 1923 he drafted the design of a flying wing. And in 1930 he actually built a flying test model of a ship which was mostly wing, its tail structure being supported by two small beams.

In the meantime he was designing such famous airplanes as the Lockheed Vega, which combined a streamlined monocoque fuselage with a full cantilever wing; standard construction in the fast aircraft of today. But all the while...in his office, at his drawing table, in his study at home Jack Northrop was working on the idea of a design that would approach the point where the lift::drag ratic reached 100. (The lift::drag ratio of a modern transport is about 15).

When the Northrop Wing began to take shape, Jack Northrop enlisted the aid of Dr. von KaKrman, director of the Daniel Guggenheim School of Aeronautics at the California Institute of Technology. Dr. von Karman and his assistant, Dr. William R. Sears, and Jack Northrop and W. J. Cerny, Northrop engineer in charge of the project, worked together in solving the intricate problems that arose. And that cooperation led to the two scientists joining the Northrop firm, Dr. von Karman as aerodynamic consultant and Dr. Sears as chief aerodynamisist.

It also led to completion of the first true flying wing airplane which may change the future of military and commercial aviation.

TWO THANKSGIVINGS

To settle all of the confusion about some states celebrating Thanksgiving on one Thursday and others on another Thursday, maybe we should hereafter have two Thanksgivings in all states.

This year, at least, Americans have so many things to be thankful for that it might well require two days to do an adequate job of giving thanks.

Perhaps one Thursday should be devoted to giving thanks for our personal blessings and the other for our country—for its freedom, its riches, its production capacity and the genius of its people.

When we compare America with any other country in the world, it seems as though God has showered us with favors which have been denied to all other peoples. Practically anything you can think of—food, housing, raw materials, comfort, gold, education, freedom, churches—we have in greater abundance than any other nation.

Thanksgiving is the time for us to reflect on these blessings and to pledge ourselves to their preservation.

Throughout the world today millions of people are looking to America with envy and with hope. The unfortunate people of Europe and Asia see our country as the nearest thing to heaven on earth—and they also see us as the one nation which has the strength, the morale and vision needed to make the world of the future a better place to live in.

A world made up of countries like America is the dream of all other peoples. We should thank God that we happen to be part of this great free nation and ask God to help us in the major role which we have assumed in spreading the gospel of freedom to all of mankind.

SIX INCH SERMON

REV. ROBERT H. HARPER

Prayer and Thnaksgiving.

Lesson for November 23: Matthew 6: 5-15; Ephesians 5: 20; I Thessalonians 5: 16-18.

Golden Text: I Thessalonians 5: 17, 18.

Jesus spoke of men who loved to pray in public places to be seen of men. And some mene today sem most concerned in their prayers in the public worship to be heard of men. Jesus speaks primarily of the individual's prayer—alone with God. "Vain repetitions" are not required. God needs not to be informed and impressed by "much speaking." He "knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him."

We call the model of prayer which Jesus gave his disciples the Lord's Prayer. Let us make it our own. It includes all we need ask. Following affirmation of faith in the Father, and praise, we are to pray for the coming of God's kingdom and the doing of his will. "Thy will be done" is the substance of all prayer. If God's will be done in us and for us we shall need nothing more, and such a petition demands that we commit ourselves to God's will. But particular prayer for oneself follows for bread forgivness and deliverance from temptation. We forgive and pray to be forgiven that we may be right with God and our fellows, and we pray for deliverance from temptation that we may be true to ourselves.

Prayer should be accompanied by thanksgiving. Craven indeed is the man who freely receives but never gives God thanks. We should not always come into God's presence just to ask for something we want. We should also come to thank him for what he has already done. And sometimes our best communion with God would be in silence—in refraining from doing all the talking ourselves and in listening to hear what God might say to us.

CHAPTER VIII

Synopsis

Harley Longstreet, broker, dies in a trolley car from poisin scratched into his hand by a needle-pierced cork in his pocket. He was taking a party of friends, incelebration of his engagement to Cherry Browne, an actress, to his West Englewood home. His partner, DeWitt, DeWitt's wife, Fern, and his daughter Jeanne, her fiancee Christopher Lord, Cherry's vaudeville friend Pollux, Ahearn, friend of DeWitt, Imperiale, middle-aged Latin, and Michael Collins, brawny Irishman, make up the group. District Attorney Bruno and Inspector Thumm, aided by Drury Lane, retired Shakespearean actor, investigate. Each member of the party seems to have some grievance against Longstreet but Thumm and Bruno think DeWitt guilty. Longstreet had had an affair with Fern DeWitt and he had a sinister hold on DeWitt. Lane declares he knows the murderer but identifies him only as Mr. X. Later a man is murdered on a ferryboat while Buno, Thumm and Lane are waiting to meet the writer of an anonymous letter. DeWitt, whom they meet there by chance, joins them. The murdered man is Conductor Wood of the fatal trolley. Evidently it was he who had written the anonymous note. Lane learns that Felipe Maquinchao of Uruguay was staying at DeWitt's house. Quacev, Lane's attendant, investigates DeWitt admits he and Longstreet made their fortunes ranching in Uruguay, but refuses further information. He is arrested for the death of Wood—presumably killed because he knew DeWitt murdered Longstreet. DeWitt seems calm, as if a hidden fear were gone. If acquitted he plans to divorce his wife. Lane calls on DeWitt's lawyer

The lawyer moodily surveyed the litter on his desk. "The case is almost impossible, Mr. Lane. I have told DeWitt that unless he alters his attitude he's in for it, but he persists in that devastating clammishness of his. The trial's been on for days now, yet I can't get a thing out of him. Bruno rested for the state this afternoon and I launch my defense tomorrow morning. All I can do is present the alternative of Bruno's argument—that is, a frameup."

"Do you know, Mr. Lyman," Lane murmured, "it is a matter of complete astonishment to me that not one of the keen minds surveying this case have pierced the veil of non-essentials and seen the—to me, at least—perfectly photographic truth beneart."

"Do you mean," Lyman asked quickly, "that you are in the posession of a pertinent fact, of which the rest of us know nothing, that will prove DeWitt's innocence?"

"Mr. Lyman, I know only that Inspector Thumm, District Attronev Bruno and yourself know. I have the feeling that DeWitt, who has a sharp brain, would have seen the truth, perhaps, were he not the central figure."

"For heaven's sake, Mr. Lane," Lyman cried, "what is it?"

"Listen carefully," said Lane kindly "Make notes if you will -"

"One moment!" Lyman ran to a cabinet. "Here's a dictaphone—talk to your heart's content."

At nine-thirty Lane left a jubilant Lyman, grabbing for the telephone.

Judge Grimm, a dour man, entered and the fifth day of John DeWitt's trial for murder began.

The preliminaries over, Lyman rose briskly, glanced cheerfully at the jury, grinned over at the District Attorney, and stated to the Court: "Your Honor, as the first witness for the defense, I call upon the defendant, John O. DeWitt."

DeWitt had an almost detached manner as Lyman put the usual preliminary questions, then asked: "Will you please relate to the Court and the jury the events of the evening of Wednesday, September the ninth, between the time you left your office and the time you reached the Weehawken ferry."

"I left my office at 5:30 and took the subway downtown to the Exchange Club on Wall Street. I went on to the gymnasium with the intention of exercising a bit before dinner but I cut my right forefinger on a piece of apparatus—an ugly gash which bled immoderately. The club physician, Dr. Morris, treated it and wanted to bandage the finger, but I didn't think it was necessary and. . ."

"Cone moment, Mr. DeWitt," interrupted Lyman blandly. "Was there any other reason for refusing to have your finger bandaged?"

"Yes. I intended to stay at the club most of the evening and since the wound had stopped bleeding through Dr. Morris' ministrations, I preferred not to be inconvienced with an awkwad bandage. It would also have necessitated my answering friendly questions about the accident and I am rather sensitive about these things. Dr. Morris told me to be careful of the finger, since a twist or bump would reopen the wound and it would bleed again. I redressed with some difficulty and went to the club restaurant with my friend Franklin Ahearn, with whom I had made a diner appointment. We spent the evening at the club with other business acquaintances of mine. I was asked to join in a game of bridge, but was forced to refuse because of my hand. At 10:10 I left the club and took a cab to the ferry. . ."

Bruno was on his feet, protesting to the testimony as "irrevalent and immaterial" and demanding that it be stricken off the record.

Lyman said: "Your honor, the defendant's testimony is important in building up a defense which will prove his innocence."

Judge Grimm overruled the District Atorney's objection, motioning Lyman to continue. But Lyman turned to Bruno and said: "Your witness."

Brunos cowled, then rose and for fifteen minutes badgered DeWitt, attempting to shake his story and bring out facts relating to Longstreet. To these Lyman inexorably objected and was sustained Finally, after a dry reprimand from Judge Grimm, District Attorney Brunos at down, mopping his forehead and DeWitt stepped from the stand.

"I call as second witness for the defense," announced Lyman, "Franklin Ahearn."

DeWitt's friend, wearing a look of complete stupefaction, was sworn in

"Did you notice Mr. DeWitt's hurt finger during your dinner together at the club?" asked Lyman.

"Yes It was aw and ugly-looking but the cut had formed a rudimentary scab of dried blood."

"Did anything occur at the dinner table or afterward which bears upon this point, Mr. Ahearn?"

Ahearn sat thoughtfully stroking his jaw. "Yes. Mr DeWitt held his right hand rather rigidly and used only his left hand for eating purposes It was necessary for the waiter to cut his chop."

"Your witness, Mr. Bruno "

"Did you know where the defendant was going after he left you at 10.10 that evening?"

"No."

"How is it that you did not leave wit him?"

"Mr. DeWitt said he had an appointment."

"With whom?"

"He didn't say, and of course I didn't ask."

What did you do after the defendan left the club?"

Lyman was on his feet again smiling another objection. Again Judge Grimm sustained and Bruno released the witness.

"For my third witness," Lyman said in a deliberate drawl, "Inspector Thumm!"

Thumm started, like a boy caught stealing apples, thudded into the witness chair.

"You were in charge of the police investigation on the ferry boat when Wood was discovered murdered?"

"I was!"

"Where were you standing just before the body was fished from the river?"

"On the upper passenber deck, at the railing."

"Who was with you?"

"The defendant and Mr. Drury Lane."

"Did you notice Mr. DeWitt's finger was cut?"

"Yes."

"Please describe the appearance of the wound as you saw it at that moment."

"Well, it looked sort of raw. There was a dried-blood scab formed over the cut."

"Over the entire length of the cut Inspector? Thescab was in one piece."

"Yes. It looked very stiff."

"Now, Inspector, please tell what happened after you noticed Mr. DeWitt's wound."

"The body was grappled at that moment and we made a dash for the stairway leading down to the lower deck."

"Did anything pertaining to Mr. DeWitt's wound occur as you were doing this?"

Thumm said sullenly: "Yes. The defendant reached the door first and grabbed the knob. He sort of cried out, and we saw the cut on his finger had opened. It was bleeding."

Lyman leaned forward and tapped Thumm's beefy knee: "The scab opened and the wound began to bleed merely from the defendant's grasping the door knob?"

"Yes."

"That's all, Inspector. Your witness, Mr. Bruno." Bruno shook his head and Thumm descended, his face a study in mingled disgust, astonishment and understanding.

Lyman next called Dr. Morris.

"You have heard the preceding witness describe the condition of the wound and the scab when he saw it at the rail of the boat. Could this wound as Inspector Thumm described it have been open, let us say, fifteen minutes before he saw it?"

"Positively not. Had it been opened even an hour before, the scab could not have been in one continuous piece."

"Would you say the defendant could have grasped and lifted a two-hundred pound object a few minutes before Inspector Thumm saw his wound at the railing in the condition described and shoved and hurled it over the railing and bevond a two and a half foot shelf without opening that wound?"

Again Bruno objected, but the judge ruled that the professional opinion solicited was pertinent to the defense argument.

Dr. Morris said: "He could not have done what you have just described without opening the wound."

With a smile of triumph Lman said "You may cross-examine, Mr. Bruno."

"Dr. Morris, under guise of your professional knowledge and experience would you dare to deny that the defendant could have used his left hand to perform the aforementioned act without opening the wound on his right?"

"Naturally, if he didn't use his right hand he wouldn't open the cut on the right hand.

Bruno looked hard at the jury and sat down. Dr. Morris began to descend but Lyman waved him back.

"Dr. Morris, you have just heard the District Attorney insinuate the defendant could have disposed of the body by using only his left hand. In your opinion, could he?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"I have known Mr. DeWitt professionally for years. He is right handed and his left arm, as is usual with dexterous persons, is the weaker He weighs only one hundred and fifteen pounds and is a weak man physically. From these facts, that it would be impossible for a one hundred and fifteen pound man, using only one arm and that the weaker of the two, to do what you have described with a two hundred pound body!"

"We're the two prize idiots of New York," groaned Bruno, slapping papers into his briefcase. "We had the facts at our fingertips all the time and never once made the obvious leap to the truth."

Thumm rose, shaking himself like a shaggy mastiff. "From now on little Thummy listens to Drury Lane with respect. Especially on the subject of Mr. X!"

Drury Lane studied the face of his host unobserved. DeWitt stood in a group of his friends, smiling and chattering, making crackling retorts to friendly jibes. From the moment the foreman of the jury had waggled his lantern jaws: "Not guilty," DeWitt had cast off the armor of his silence.

The party had congregated in a private hotel suite. Jeanne DeWitt was there, sparkling and rosy; Christopher Lord, and Franklin Ahearn looming over the frail body of his friend; Louis Imperiale, and Lyman and Brooks and, by himself, Drury Lane.

DeWitt murmured an apology and slipped out of the chatting group. In a corner, the two men faced each other.

"Mr. Lane, I haven't had the opportunity...I can't find words to express my—my profound thanks."

Lane chuckled. "I see that even lawyers as hardened as Frederick Lyman cannot resist impulsive indiscretion."

Japanese tank units are seen crossing a river in the Hunan province in China as their forces press deeply into Generalissimo Kai-shek's territory. It has been reported that 200,000 Chinese were caught in a pincer trap by advancing Jap forces. Units such as these have already made their appearance in French Indo-China as the crisis in the Far East steams on.

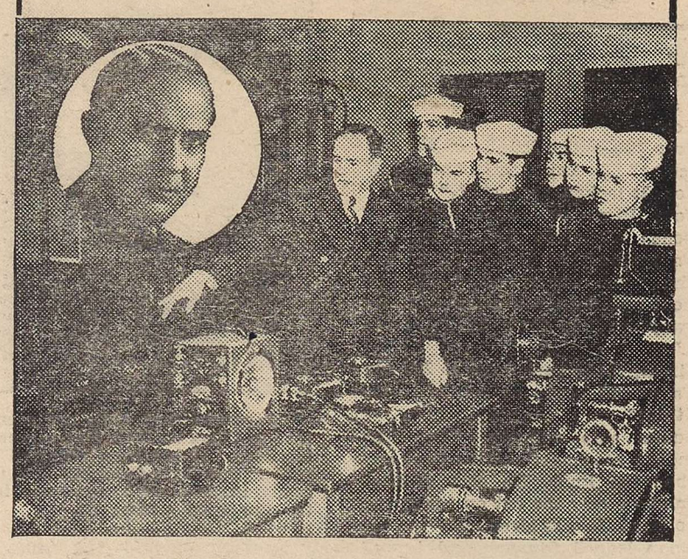
"NAVY TRADE TRAINING GAVE ME MY START" SAYS PRESIDENT, SPERRY CORPORATION



THOMAS A. MORGAN (pictured in insert), president of the Sperry Corporation, world's largest manufacturers of aeronautical and marine instruments, received his early technical training in the U. S. Navy, in which he enlisted as a young man. "This has proved of great value to me in later years," said ex-sailor Morgan. Pictured above are new Navy recruits receiving electrical training at one of the modernly equipped Navy Trade Schools. The Navy offers training to young men in nearly 50 different trades and vocations.

Opportunities for advancement, to learn skilled trades, for travel and adventure are identical whether a man enlists in the regular Navy or the Naval Reserve—and his pay, food, clothing, medical and dental care are the same.

TAHOE COUPLE TO MARRY AT RENO ON NOVEMBER 29

TAHOE CITY, Nov. 20—The marriage of Miss Dorothy Jean Wheat, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl O. Wheat, to Albert Henry, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Henry of Tahoe City, will take place at the Methodist Episcopal Church in Reno on Saturday, Nov. 29, at 1:30 p. m. A wedding reception will follow in the church parlor.

Miss Wheat, who has been employed by the telephone company for some time past, has been extensively feted by her friends at showers and paties.

She was honored at a lovely dinner party at Celeste's in Kings eBach on Friday evening. The long table was beautifully decorated with gay Autumn leaves, pink and blue miniature bridesmaids and dainty place cards. Following the repast, the bride-elect was presented with a white chenille bed spread and a bride's book, a remembrance from her colleagues

Thefollowing, all telephone operators, were guests at the dinner party: Misses Eunice Duffee, and Catherine Murphy of the Tahoe City office, and Nina Greig, Peggy Toler and Doris Arntzen of the Brockway office.

The young couple will make their home in Sacramento where the prospective bridegroom is employed in the air corps as a mechanic at McClellan Field.

Truckee and Tahoe friends extend best wishes for years of happiness to the popular young people.

Mrs. Lyle Smith honored the ninth birthday of her daughter, Nina Mae by taking a birthday cake, and other refreshments to the primary room of Tahoe Lake school Thursday where the students joined in the celebration after school.

SPECIAL PROGRAM PRESENTED SUNDAY

TAHOE CITY, Nov. 20—The Tahoe branch of American Sunday School Union presented a special program at Tahoe Community Center on Sunday in celebration of Thanksgiving. Rev C. W. Graves of Reno, missionary in charge of this district, was present and assisted the superintendent, Mrs George Gates.

The program included: hymn Praise Him and Onward Christian Soldiers by the assembly; Thanksgiving Prayer, Bette Wheat; roll call; the 23rd Psalm Chant by Linda Cramer, Blodwyn Tiffee, Betty Perry; "I'll Be A Sunbeam" by Linda Cramer and Blodwyn Tiffee; Jesus Loves Even Me by the assembly and a talk and prayer by Rev. Graves.

There is now a great need for a musician to assist in the Sunday school sevices and programs. Officers and students request that anyone who can help in the music and singing please phone Mrs. Gates and the whole school will be very grateful The children plan to present special programs as often as possible but are very much handicapped through the lack of ome one to play piano

Temperatures Drop In Tahoe Area; Peaks In District Snow Covered

TAHOE CITY, Nov. 20—The level of Lake Tahoe on Monday, Nov. 17 was 6223.8 feet with only one gate partly open at the Truckee River dam outlet and about 10 CSF of water leaving the lake. Temperatures on Sunday varied from a high of 40 degrees to a low of 15 on Sunday night. About two inches of snow fell on Sunday which added .66 of an inch precipitation to the lake area Barometers were still low on Monday

All the high peaks around the lake are wearing new snow caps, especially the Mount Rose range at the north end and Freels Peak at the south end. Highways are still in good condition and traffic was fairly heavy over the weekend.

TAHOE SCHOOL NEWS N TES

Three splendid sound movies were shown at Tahoe school auditorium on last Thursday afternoon through the Audio-Visual department of the county board of education. They included Children of Japan; Shelter (showing the different types of homes and buildings and methods of construction throughout the world; and the patriotic film, A Great Tribute starring Chic Sale as President Lincoln and telling the moving story of the composing of the Gettysburg Address.

Class rooms were still decorated with patriotic scenes and colors from the Amistice program and were also bright with Thanksgiving arrangements. The pimary room children had drawn and colored sketches of the Pilgrim fathers as part of their history and holiday project, which was used as a blackboard frieze.

With part of their Junior Red Cross funds the students recently bought 36 copies of the Golden Book of Favorite Songs for use in their music period.

On Friday Mr. and Mrs. Elsworth Martineili of the audio-visual department of the county board of education were at Tahoe assisting in planning arrangements for the presentation of a radio play which students will give after the Thanksgiving holidays. The school's activity room will be used as a radio studio and the broadcast will be received in the auditorium. The play will be based on the historic Lewis and Clark expedition and the early history of the west

Many of the former Tahoe students were home for the holiday attending the American Legion dance last week They included Misses Marilyn Hinkle, Pat Henry, Helen Worden, Margaret Luhrs and James Worden, Billy Bechdolt and others.

Better Light HELPS KEEP EYES RIGHT!

PEOPLE say modern lighting that is "easy on the eyes" makes the eyes feel better . . . And they are right . . . Good lighting brings out the beauty of the home furnishings . . . It aids personal beauty, too.

Light that is glaring brightness or that is dim and gloomy makes hard work of seeing. It causes squints and frowns and scowls and brings on many premature wrinkles and face-lines.

Good, modern lighting merely means the right kind of light, and the right amount of light where you read or sew or use your eyes. And you can have it easily, quickly, inexpensively.

AMERICAN RAILWAYS ASKED TO CUT RATES TO MEET WATERWAY

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 20— A move is under way for lower railroad freight rates on iron and steel articles shipped to the Pacific Coast.

Declaring that higher all-rail freight charges have increased the cost of shipping large quantities of steel needed for defense purposes, the Office of Price Administration at Washington, D. C., and other government agencies have asked railroads to reduce rates to that area.

Prior to the emergency, it was pointed out, steel and iron was largely shipped from Atlantic to Pacific ports at relatively low rates. Ships that once handled this business are now mostly in foreign service, so shippers are using all-rail service almost exclusively.

Quito, Capital of Ecuador, 2,000 Feet Higher Nearby Summit Of Sierra Nevada

ENWRAPPED with snow and half hidden by fleecy clouds Chimborazo lifts its hoary head 20,500 feet above sea level to become the highest peak in Ecuador. This little republic's share of the Andes is heaped up in gigantic folds which disappear in the west into the Pacific lowlands and in the east drop down into the Oriente, which is Ecuador's part of the immeasurable wilderness of Amazonia. Through the heart of this mountain region extends a veritable avenue of sky-towering cones with a longitudinal tableland between cut into sections by transversal ranges. It is on these plateaux that three-fourths of the population is assembled. Here, also, are raised the crops and the animals which feed the population.

The mountains, beautiful as they are however, have for centuries practically walled off and isolated the inland cities. For example Quito, the capital and one of the three oldest cities in the Western Hemisphere, was never reached by a railroad until 1908; and the first motor highway to connect Guayaquil and Quito is only now being completed —as part of the Great Pan American Highway system. Airlines were introduced some time ago, and the flight between Guayaquil and Quito is made in an hour and a quarter. Despite the fact, however, that the capital has led a more or less isolated life there have been compensations, as any traveler who has visited Quito on the 24-day cruises to Ecuador will testify. The city, because of its lofty position 9,500 feet above the sea, enjoys a marvelous all year 'round climate even although it lies practically on the Equator; it presents views of more than a dozen of the most dramatic peaks in South America, and it retains to an unusual degree the characteristics of Spanish colonial days.

S. P. TO SERVE BOTH THANKSGIVING DAYS IN DINERS THIS YEAR

Housewives, when you go to the market to purchase supplies for your Thanksgiving dinner, you may think it is quite a chore to prepare such a feast. If so, you should consider the problem confronting Harry A. Butler, superintendent of dining car service for Southern Pacific.

Butler has charge of more than 100 dining cars that operate in the seven western states and to add to his problems he must serve not one, but two Thanksgiving dinners. That is because California, Oregon, Arizona, Utah and New Mexico will observe November 20 as Thanksgiving Day, whereas Texas and Nevada plan to eat their turkey on November 27. And so, to please everybody, Butler will serve turkey "and all the trimmings" on Southern Pacific dining cars on both days.

Following is a list of supplies Butler figures will be consumed by S. P. dining car patrons on Thanksgiving Days this year: 3500 pounds of turkey, 1400 pounds of celery, 350 jars of cranberry sauce, 175 quarts of gravy, 850 pounds of mince meat, 350 pounds of fruit cake, 700 loaves of bread, 250 pounds of butter, 1750 bottles of milk, 275 pounds of mixed nuts, 700 pounds of fresh vegetables and 850 pounds of fresh fruits.
